Description
Now redmine administrator can set the default gravatar for users which has no gravatar. I would like to use my own default gravatar.
The attached patch allows plugins to add an option for the default gravatar. https://github.com/yugui/redmine_fox_gravatar is an example plugin that uses this feature.

Oops, I attached a wrong patch. Please use adding-gravater-options2.patch.

Felix Schäfer suggested that developing a plugin just for a default gravatar is overdoing. <https://www.chiliproject.org/issues/212>

So I rewrote the patch. The new patch scans `public/gravatars/` and adds the found files to options for the default gravatar, just like themes. I am glad if you merge the patch.

I have some questions.

- Is copyright correct?
Please see note-204 of #4455.
- Is `.gitignore` correct?

And please see <source/trunk/lib/redmine/scm/adapters/mercurial/redminehelper.py@4833#L1>

I wrote the gravatar management based on the theme management. So it is an derivative of Redmine itself, particularly `lib/redmine/themes.rb` and `test/unit/lib/redmine/thmes_test.rb`.

I believe the copyright is correct. It should inherit JPL's copyright entry. Do you mean I should have added my own copyright entry?

And I believe `.gitignore` is also correct. This is because an additional gravatar is not a part of redmine. It is correct unless Redmine itself will have its own additional gravatar.

The license looks good to me, since 1) Redmine project is globally copyrighted by Jean-Philippe, and 2) many files would need a license update anyway. But we could include copyright from other people too, depends on Jean-Philippe thoughts on this point.

The `.gitignore` looks correct too, but I'll put it in the main `.gitignore` file as not everybody is familiar with Git here, it will be easier to maintain.

Any other blocker to include this ?

any progress?

This feature doesn't seem to be needed by a lot of people, so if you don't mind, I'd prefer to commit the plugin based solution. Is it OK for you?
