Once and a while with FF 4 RC1 I notice a redraw issue. see attached. It is usually when I am in a list of issues and try to modify the search parameters. either another filter or different display options. I have not tried to reproduce this on other browsers.

Well, this is RC1 :/

I use edge FF 4 (b13) and don't have this issue.

I close this one because there are chances it is browser-related, please reopen it if reproducible with a stable release of the browser.

So it happened today with FF 4 RC2.

workflow: I was at the all issues page. I had run a query based on issue status and target version with grouping the results by project. I then changed the display options to not have project and clicked apply.

When this happens I get a probably endless "loading ..." and spinning busy image. An 'escape' and reload fixes the problem.

FF4 has been released a few hours ago, could you reproduce with it ?

AFAICR, I've never seen that with FF 4.

It seems that this buggy layout suppose the presence of an iframe in the page, do you have any plugin installed ?

My FF was up to date when this happened this morning.

This is not easily reproducibled, but I wanted to capture what I did this time just in case it helps.

I only have the charts plugin installed.

This is infrequent, perhaps only once a week for me.

I will run with IE a bit to see if it happens there.

We recently updated to 1.2.2. I have not seen this happen in a while before that and never since then. I think this can be closed.
